Mixed results in treatment of bipolar disorder

Research suggests that certain symptoms of bipolar disorder can improve, while others may be negatively impacted.

Bipolar disorder (BD), formerly called manic depression, is a mental health condition that causes extreme mood swings that include very high, highs and very low, lows (depression).

A 2017 University of Washington study found BD patients can see some of their symptoms improved through medical cannabis use, while others may worsen.

The study found cannabis could be helpful in the relief of anger episodes, tension relief, depression, increase energy levels, attention, reasoning speed and memory.

Conversely, a 2015 study, found people with BD who use cannabis were less likely to go into remission.

BD is not currently on the list of qualifying disorders in SD.
